三、克漏字測驗（請依照段落上下文意，選出最適當的答案）

In my opinion, capital punishment is wrong. First of all, I believe that it is wrong to kill. Only God has the right to take away life. Human beings should not kill human beings. 41 a criminal has committed horrible crimes, the government does not have the right to execute him or her. Second, the threat of going to the electric chair or to the gas chamber does not stop criminals. When people commit a violent crime such as murder, they are not thinking about their punishment. 42, many murders happen when people are angry. They are not thinking about the consequences of their actions. According to a report in the New York Times, the State of Louisiana executed eight men in nine weeks in the fall of 1987. During that same time period, the murder rate in New Orleans 43 16.4 percent. This shows that the threat of capital punishment does not stop crime. The third and most important reason for abolishing the death penalty is that the government sometimes makes mistakes and executes innocent people. In fact, this has happened. According to an article in Time magazine, there were twenty-three executions of innocent people in the United States between 1900 and 1991. 44 my point of view, this makes the government itself guilty of murder. For these three reasons, I believe that the United States should get rid of capital punishment, which 45 really just “legal murder.”

四、閱讀測驗

Rats can use the rhythm of human language to tell the difference between Dutch and Japanese, researchers in Spain reported on Sunday. Their study suggests that animals, especially mammals, evolved some of the skills underlying the use and development of language long before language itself ever evolved, the researchers said.

It is the first time an animal other than a human or monkey has been shown to have this skill. These findings have remarkable parallels with data from human adults, human newborns, and cotton-up tamarins,” the researchers wrote in their report, published in the Journal of Experimental Psychology: Animal Behavior Processes, which is published by the American Psychological Association.

For their study neuroscientists Juan Toro and colleagues at Barcelona’s Scientific Park tested 64 adult male rats. They used Dutch and Japanese because these languages were used in earlier, similar tests, and because they are very different from each other in use of words, rhythm and structure.

The rats were trained to respond to either Dutch or Japanese using food as a reward. Then they were separated into four groups—one that heard each language spoken by a native, one that heard synthesized speech, one that heard sentences read in either language by different speakers and a fourth that heard the languages played backwards.

Rats rewarded for responding to Japanese did not respond to Dutch and rats trained to recognize Dutch did not respond to the spoken Japanese. The rats could not tell apart Japanese or Dutch played backwards.

(3)46. Rats can tell the difference between which of the following languages?

- (1) Dutch and Spanish.
- (2) Japanese and English.
- (3) Dutch and Japanese.
- (4) English and Japanese.

(2)47. For the first time, researchers have shown animals have evolved which of the following?

- (1) An acute sense of hearing.
- (2) Skills underlying the use of language.
- (3) Ability to differentiate languages played backward.
- (4) Innate capacity for learning language.

(3)48. Which of the following statements is NOT true?

- (1) The rats show parallels with human adults and children.
- (2) Cotton-up tamarins are a species of monkey.
- (3) The rats show parallels to human children but not adults.
- (4) The rats used in the experiment were all males.

(4)49. The two languages were selected for which of the following reasons?

- (1) They were never used in such experiments before.
- (2) The cotton-up tamarins were not familiar with these languages.
- (3) They were easier for the rats to understand.
- (4) They are very different from each other.

(4)50. What did the rats learn to do?

- (1) They learned to understand the two languages.
- (2) They learned to understand simple words and phrases.
- (3) They learned to use one of the languages but not the other.
- (4) They learned to respond to one of the languages when rewarded.
