四、閱讀測驗

Hotels are changing their wasteful habits and getting involved in the move to save the environment. At major hotels throughout the world, guests are being greeted by shampoo and mouthwash in glass dispensers instead of elaborate plastic bottles. They are discovering recycling bins in their rooms, and are encouraged to use towels more than once before they are washed.

This green movement is becoming increasingly popular among tourists who look for service providers with an environmental conscience. The business of eco-tours is increasing rapidly. Travel agents are booking clients on "Save the Rainforest" expeditions and similar trips where the emphasis is on protecting the world.

The tourists on these trips are given lectures on the effects of the loss of our planet's natural wonders and what they can do to reverse the trend. They do not need much convincing. The travelers on these excursions are already committed to environmental protection. In fact, a two-year study of litter in Antarctica found that the entire collection of litter left by visitors to the continent could be put in one small sandwich bag. Compare that amount of litter with what the average traveler finds strewn on the streets around a hotel, even an environmentally sensitive hotel.

- (2)46. In the second paragraph, the author mentioned that "The business of eco-tours is increasing rapidly." What does "eco" mean here?
- (1) It means "economics" – the study of the way in which money and goods are produced and used.
- (2) It means "ecology" – the way in which plants, animals, and people are related to their environment.
- (3) It means "echo" – a sound that you hear again after a loud noise.
- (4) It means "eclectic" – someone who chooses the best or most useful parts from many different ideas.

- (4)47. What trend is becoming popular among hotel guests?
- (1) Getting larger rooms.
 - (2) Having better amenities.
 - (3) Eating lighter foods.
 - (4) Protecting the earth.
- (3)48. What does the article imply about glass dispensers and re-using towels?
- (1) It's a marketing gimmick.
 - (2) It's only effective on eco-tours.
 - (3) It's a wise choice environmentally
 - (4) It's an idea proposed by consumers.
- (3)49. Which group would most likely be members of the green movement?
- (1) Fashion designers.
 - (2) Golf course owners.
 - (3) Travelers who are environmentally conscious.
 - (4) Business people who visit a place the first time.
- (2)50. According to the article, eco-travelers should expect _____.
- (1) to find litter.
 - (2) to hear lectures on the environment.
 - (3) to pay more than other travelers.
 - (4) to carry their own food.
