四、閱讀測驗【請依照段落上下文意,選出最適當的答案】

Think twice the next time you decide to copy your boss on an email. That simple little " CC " box could send a message that ruins your relationship with the other recipients.

A study in Harvard Business Review asked working adults to imagine that their coworker always, sometimes, or rarely CC 'ed their boss in emails. The results showed that employees felt way less trusted when their coworker " always " copied the supervisor than when they " sometimes " or " almost never " did.

The results of the survey are not surprising. Sometimes the supervisor really does need to stay in the loop with an email chain. But most times, employees are purposely sending the message that they do not think the recipients follow through with what they're asking unless the boss gets involved, says career expert Bruce Tulgan. "That is an expression of lack of trust," he says.

Breaking down that trust level in your office can have serious consequences. Like in any relationship, coworkers need trust to keep things running smoothly. "When people have trust, there is a much higher level of wanting to deliver for each other," says Tulgan. "When people have morale, they try harder." That means more willingness to take risks and make decisions, he says.

Instead of bringing in the boss, get what you need from colleagues by helping them help you, says Tulgan. For instance, give your colleagues enough time to do what you ask, and gently remind them if the deadline is coming up, he says.

As a rule of thumb, only about 20 percent of what you do in the office is truly urgent, and those are the only times you should consider looping in your boss, says career expert Dr. Todd Dewett. "The most important client, the most important project, key relationships," he says. "That's when you might consider the occasional use of CC."

- (3)26. What is the main idea of the passage above?
 - (1) There is no trust among coworkers in an office.
 - (2) You should wait and not follow up on emails you sent out earlier.
 - (3) Always copying your boss on emails is a bad professional habit.
 - (4)Pay no attention to those emails not copied to your boss.
- (2)27. Which of the following is suggested by the passage?
 - (1) You should always loop in your boss to be consistent.
 - (2) Showing trust to your colleagues helps to run things more smoothly.
 - (3) You should not expect your boss to help you.
 - (4) Not copying your boss makes your email incomplete.
- (1)28. According to the passage, which of the following statements is true?
 - (1)People tend to try harder when they feel trusted.
 - (2) It's a good habit to copy your boss on all the emails.
 - (3) A rule of thumb is to copy your boss in 80% of your emails.
 - (4) Always copying your boss shows you trust your colleagues.
- (4)29. According to the passage, which of the following occasions might you consider copying your boss?
 - (1)Casual matters
- (2)Telling a secret
- (3)Personal matters
- (4)Urgent matters

- (3)30. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?
 - (1) Workers need only spend 20% of their time to answer urgent emails.
 - (2) The boss will trust you more if you always copy him/her onemails.
 - (3)Helping people to help you is a good way to make things work more smoothly.
 - (4)All emails with the boss in the CC box are truly urgent.

了一套稱為「微額貸款」的系統。微額貸款的金額非常小--通常不到美金一百元。這些錢是用來借給開發中國家的鄉下窮人。這些人既沒有土地,財產也少得可憐,通常根本沒辦法從銀行借到錢。而有了這種微額貸款之後,他們就能購買一些器具或設備,開始經營小生意。如此一來,他們便有機會從貧困中翻身。第二題:英翻中【配分20分】

Trans fats are in so many popular foods that the average American eats about two kilograms of them a year. Hydrogenated oil is used as a shortening in many baked goods, including cookies, crackers, and doughnuts. It is also used in some margarine and is commonly used for deep frying, so it is often found in French fries and fried chicken. The ban on trans fats, then, will likely have a serious effect on the food industry in the U.S. and around the world.
