第一篇：

Perhaps a bit odd looking at first, the QR code is something which small business owners and entrepreneurs need to be aware of since it is increasingly becoming an important tool. The QR code is basically a natural extension of the conventional barcode, 31 has been around since the mid 1970s on everything from supermarket groceries to large container shipments. It was designed in 1994 for Japanese auto-makers to track car parts. Now it is 32 by big companies and small businesses. The QR code has many advantages 33 a conventional barcode. The main advantage is that you can store up to a hundred times more information on a QR code than on a conventional horizontal barcode. 34, QR codes can be scanned from any direction for 360 degrees. This makes them easier for your device to read and lessens the possibility of background interference. The third main 35 is that from a marketing point of view, the code's appearance is unique and interesting, increasing the likelihood of engaging the customer in any campaign where it might be deployed.

For many years, Christopher Reeve had been known for playing the movie character Superman in the Hollywood movies. But in 1995, he broke his neck in a horseback riding accident and spent 36 in a wheelchair, almost completely unable to move. He also needed a machine to help him breathe. 37, in spite of his disabilities, Reeve refused to be depressed and fought back. Four years after his terrible 38, he received an award for his autobiography, Still Me. It is a humorous story of his life, showing both his courage and his 39. That same year, he also won recognition for starring in the movie Rear Window. "40," he said. He died in 2004, after a heart attack. His example should provide encouragement and inspiration for people everywhere.

第一篇：

A bicycle-sharing system, or public bicycle system, is a service in which bicycles are made available for shared use to individuals on a very short-term basis. Many such systems offer subscriptions that make the first 30–45 minutes of use either free or very inexpensive. Bicycles are parked at various terminals around a city. In some systems, the bicycles are locked and a cash deposit unlocks them. Deposits are returned when the bicycles are returned at different terminals. In some other systems, users have to register before taking a bicycle. Sometimes credit cards are charged.

The intention of the service is to provide environmentally friendly and economical transportation in inner city areas. People who choose to cycle instead of drive help to reduce traffic congestion, air pollution, and noise pollution. They save money and get exercise, without worrying about their own bicycle being stolen.

Bike-sharing emerged in Europe in the 1960s, but its wider use and development came in the mid-2000s thanks to the introduction of information technology. As of June 2014, public bike systems were available in 50 countries on five continents, including 712 cities. As of May 2011, China's Wuhan and Hangzhou bike-sharing systems were the largest in the world, while the one in Paris was the largest outside of China. And the countries with the most systems are Spain (132), Italy (104), and China (79).

When the bike-sharing programs first started, theft was a problem. In 1993, in Cambridge, U.K., so many bicycles were stolen the first day that the city stopped the program temporarily. Since then, cities have taken creative measures to prevent the theft of bicycles. In some programs, the bicycles are painted a single color, often white or another very visible color such as orange or yellow. Brand names are painted over. Spokes and tire rims are painted. It would be difficult for thieves to get much money for these bicycles. In other programs, the bicycles are designed with special parts that cannot easily be combined with parts from other bicycles.

(1)41. What is the main idea of this article?

- (1) The nature, history and development of bicycle-sharing systems.
- (2) The advantages and disadvantages of bicycle-sharing systems

第二篇：

Chad Pregrackegrew up in Moline, Illinois, less than 100 feet away from the Mississippi River, which supplies drinking water to about 18 million people in more than 50 U.S. cities. As he got older, he noticed the river was becoming more and more polluted with plastic, trash, and other junk floating around in it. One weekend, he decided to collect the trash he could from the river –by hand. He waded into the water and removed items that shouldn't have been in it and filled his backyard with them. Someone reported his activities to a local news station, and as a result, a group wrote Chad a check for over $8,000. Chad used the money to buy a boat and to start a nonprofit organization to continue the work he had started. He named his organization Living Lands and Waters.

Over the years Chad has sponsorship from over 60 corporations and foundations. The organization has nine full-time employees and many volunteers, and has removed more than 1,000 tons of garbage from America's largest rivers. Chad and his team have pulled tires, refrigerators, air conditioners, and even toilets from the water. In the summer of 2008, the Midwestern United States suffered terrible flooding, and Cedar Rapids was particularly hard hit. Living Lands and Waters was there on the Cedar River after the flood, helping with the clean-up efforts. In 2013, the news network CNN named Chad one of the top 10 heroes of the year.

Even till today, Chad himself remains involved in the actual physical cleaning of rivers—one river at a time, one piece of garbage at a time. He also writes a newspaper column that has a readership primarily in Iowa and Illinois, and he often speaks to audiences about the importance of rivers and of keeping them clean and tells his story, reminding people that an initial step taken by one person can make a real difference.

(4)46. What would be the best title for this article?

- (1) The Importance of a Clean Environment.
- (2) The Autobiography of Chad Pregracke.
- (3) CNN Top 10 Heroes of 2013.
- (4) A Life's Mission of Cleaning Rivers.

(3)47. What is TRUE about Chad Pregracke?

- (1) Now he writes newspaper columns to numerous readers nationwide.
- (2) He grew up in Illinois and moved to Mississippi later in life.
- (3) He bought a boat and started his nonprofit organization with an $8,000 check from a group.
- (4) He founded his nonprofit organization and has supported it with his own money.

(1)48. What has his organization done over the years?

- (1) It helped clean Cedar River after a serious flood in 2008.
- (2) It has picked up 1,000 kilos of junk from America's largest rivers.
- (3) It has gathered support from about just a few companies and foundations.
- (4) It has removed from the rivers all kinds of things excluding tires, refrigerators, toilets, etc.

(2)49. What does Chad's story tell us?

- (1) A humble and normal kid can become a multimillionaire one day.
- (2) A simple action started by a single person may lead to a big change.
- (3) Collecting garbage should never be something to be ashamed of.
- (4) Anyone who throws garbage into the rivers must be punished.

(3)50. What does the phrase “ hard hit ” in Paragraph 2 mean?
