第一篇：

Bluebirds are often known as the “bluebirds of happiness”, meaning they are generally associated with the concepts of joy, happiness, and harmony. The bluebird is a symbol of hope, love, positivity, and renewal. It symbolizes the essence of life and beauty. A bluebird reminds you to give yourself up to the beauty of nature that surrounds you and set yourself free. One of the most significant symbols of the bluebirds is associated with their wing color; blue is symbolic of peace, tranquility, and contentment, and so are these beautiful birds. Overall, the arrival of the bluebird is a sign of hope since it could mean spiritual transformation.

Even in the harshest climates, when they have a scarcity of food, these birds still manage to sing cheerfully and do so because they know better days are ahead. It is a sign that you should never lose faith, even in your darkest hours. You must hold on to the belief that in the end, it will all be alright.

Bluebirds also stand for the inner child in all of us. They remind us that while the world might be a cruel place, you should never lose your kindness and innocence because these are the traits that make you a better person. They have a positive spirit and keep the negative energies at bay. The bluebirds remind you to be aware of whatever sources of happiness around you so that you can reap the happiness out of those sources.

A bluebird is often seen as a spirit animal. A spirit animal refers to a spirit which helps guide or protect a person on a journey and whose characteristics that person shares or embodies. The bluebird spirit firmly believes in spreading joy everywhere they go. The bluebird spirit animal almost always means good news; however, regardless of what type of news we receive or change we notice, a bluebird spirit animal always prepares us for what lies ahead. In times of trial, it teaches us to stay confident in our plan, and when goodness comes to us, it encourages us to share our joy with others.

A German Requiem by the composer Johannes Brahms is a very important and famous piece of classical music. It is a large work for orchestra, choir and solo singers. The music has seven movements or main sections.

Brahms wrote this requiem between 1865 and 1868. A requiem is a type of religious composition that remembers and honors people who have died. However, Brahms' work is a bit different from traditional requiem masses because the lyrics are taken from the German Luther Bible instead of the usual Latin texts.

The main purpose of A German Requiem is to provide comfort and consolation to the living people who are grieving for their deceased loved ones. The lyrics focus on ideas like finding rest, faith in eternal life after death, and the temporary nature of earthly suffering. The overall tone is one of peacefulness, hope and acceptance rather than sadness or fear of death.

One of the most well-known and beloved sections is the fourth movement which begins "How lovely is thy dwelling place." This tranquil section depicts the soul finding its home in heaven. Another highlight is the opening movement with the lyrics "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

When it was first performed, some critics disapproved of Brahms using a non-church, non-Latin text for a requiem.
