五、閱讀測驗

The first electronic computers went into operation in 1946. Since its invention the computer has changed greatly , and it has more and more application . It can free people from complicated measurement and computation.

Accurate measurement and exact computation are the bases of modern engineering and scientific research . For example , scientists usually test their theories by practical experiments. They have to make computations before they can say that the results of their experiments are correct. There are complex computations in science and engineering . Scientists are unable to make them , but the computer can do them quickly and accurately for instance, a spacecraft cannot leave the earth and go to the moon without computers. What must the spacecraft be like? When can it leave? Will it be on the right course ? The computer must answer all these questions.

In recent years more and more people have used computers not only in Production and technology , but also in everyday life , for the simple reason that they are far more efficient than man . They have much better memories and can store large amounts of information . No man alive can do 500,000 sums in one second , but a computer can . In fact , computers can do many of the things we do , but faster and better They can control machines in factories , work out tomorrow's weather, and even do translation work . We can foresee in the future we are going to use computer for almost everything almost every day .
